Intermountain Gas Company files a General Rate Case

BOISE, ID-May 30, 2025 -Intermountain Gas Company filed a request with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (Case No. INT-G-25-02) to increase its price to serve its natural gas customers. If approved, it would increase the monthly bill for an average residential customer by about $4.69, or 11.46%, and for the average commercial customer by about $9.26, or 5.16%.

The proposed increase is for $26.5 million annually over current prices, or an 8.6% overall increase. This base price change is not impacted by changes in the cost of natural gas, which is currently about 65% of a customer's bill.

The primary reason for the request is due to the infrastructure investments made by the company since the last regulatory proceeding that was filed in 2022 and the resulting increase in depreciation expense, as well as higher labor and benefits costs.

"The main drivers of this rate request are unprecedented growth in our service area and the rising cost of doing business," said Nicole Kivisto, President and CEO of Intermountain Gas. "The rate increase requested in this filing is necessary to continue supporting Idaho's economic development through investments in the infrastructure required to safely and reliably meet growth in customer demand, as well as addressing inflationary pressures."

The Idaho PUC has up to seven months to issue a decision on this request. If approved, new rates will go into effect on January 1, 2026. Intermountain's filing is a proposal and is subject to public review and approval by the PUC. A copy of the application is available for review at the commission, its homepage www.puc.idaho.gov, as well as the company's website, www.intgas.com.
